HISTORICAL SKETCH

Nineteen sixty-eight was not a normal election year. Ordinarily, an incumbent president would have an easy path to his party's nomination for a second term, and much better than even odds at re-election. Lyndon Johnson and Hubert Humphrey had won the 1964 election in a landslide. By 1968, however, opposition to the war in Vietnam was growing, racial tensions building, the economy stalling, and a desire for real change brewing. While many discontented voters listened to independent candidate George Wallace, and Republican Richard Nixon returned from political exile, most young people looked to the Democratic Party as offering the best chance for significant change in 1968.

That meant that Johnson would receive more than token challenges to his re-nomination. Minnesota senator Eugene McCarthy became the first candidate to question the morality and legality of the Vietnam War as well as its military and political objectives. College students flocked to his campaign and canvassed door to door in his behalf in the first Democratic presidential primary on March 12 in New Hampshire. Given little chance by the pundits, McCarthy surprised everyone by finishing second with 42% of the votes, and his "new politics" seemed well on its way. Soon thereafter, an encouraged Robert Kennedy, senator from New York and former president's John F. Kennedy's brother, entered the Democratic race for president. Kennedy soon began attracting large crowds and significant media attention, and with each primary captured more delegates. On the eve of the second primary (April 2 in Wisconsin), which McCarthy would win, Johnson shocked the nation by declaring that he would not seek another term as president. He stated he could not pursue peace in Vietnam, settle domestic race relations, and get a tax bill through Congress while also running for president. Many observers thought the low poll numbers forced Johnson to bow out early in order to avoid the embarrassment of not winning his own party's nomination. Even so, he still exercised his power as president, and some felt he maintained hope that a deadlocked convention would turn to him as its candidate.

On April 4, an assassin killed civil-rights leader Martin Luther King in Memphis, Tennessee. Violence and rioting erupted in more than 70 cities, killing 39 people, and more than 50,000 federal and state troops were called in to quell the rioting. The riots helped fuel the "law and order" campaigns of Richard Nixon and George Wallace. Prominent businessmen who did not want Kennedy elected president urged Humphrey to run. John Loeb, an investment banker, and John Connor, a former Secretary of Commerce, organized a "Citizens for Humphrey" committee to raise funds among business leaders for a Humphrey campaign. Dwayne Andreas and Bob Short, fellow Minnesotans and Humphrey confidants, also helped out. Nonetheless, money problems dictated that Humphrey's wisest course was to stay out of the presidential primaries in hopes that McCarthy and Kennedy would weaken each other and that he could garner enough delegates in the non-primary states to have a chance for the nomination. On April 27, in Philadelphia, Humphrey officially announced his presidential campaign and talked about "the politics of joy." While this may have been a good summary of Humphrey's political philosophy, it seemed strangely out of touch and a poor campaign theme in a year marked by racial riots, anti-war protests, and much dissatisfaction with the status quo.

Heading Humphrey's campaign were fellow senators Walter Mondale of Minnesota and Fred Harris of Oklahoma, who organized "United Democrats for Humphrey." Their main purpose was to line up support for Humphrey among Democratic office holders, many of whom would be elected as delegates to the Democratic National Convention. Meanwhile, Kennedy won primaries in Indiana and Nebraska while McCarthy won the Oregon and Pennsylvania primaries. If Kennedy could win the crucial California primary on June 4, the momentum generated might sweep him to the nomination. Kennedy won, but that evening was assassinated by Sirhan Sirhan, a young Arab. Both Humphrey and McCarthy, as well as the rest of the nation, were stunned, and neither candidate could do much campaigning for several weeks. After the Kennedy assassination, Citizens for Humphrey had even more difficulty raising money, as potential wealthy contributors felt freer to follow their more natural inclination: give to the Republican Party.

In early August in Miami, the Republicans in a neat, quiet, relaxed, and highly organized convention that would mirror the Nixon campaign nominated Richard Nixon rather than the more moderate Nelson Rockefeller. The Democratic Convention, in contrast, was scheduled for late August in Chicago with the feeling that an "incumbent" presidential candidate would not need a long campaign. Humphrey pleaded with Johnson to switch the convention to immediately follow the Republicans in Miami, while the news media were still there. Johnson refused, and moreover used his influence to pass his Vietnam platform over Humphrey's as the official Democratic Party statement. Humphrey, who to win the nomination needed Johnson's support in attracting delegates from southern states, had no choice but to agree to Johnson's Vietnam plank.

The Chicago convention could not have been a greater disaster for Humphrey's campaign. Mayor Daley of Chicago, expecting trouble from anti-war protesters, turned the city into a virtual armed camp. Television cameras switched back and forth from coverage of heated debate on the convention floor over delegate credentials, Vietnam and other party platforms, and candidate nomination speeches to rioting in the streets. Millions of Americans saw the Chicago police mace, billy-club, and drag young person after young person into waiting paddy wagons. While some of the arrestees were clearly trying to disrupt the convention, most were peacefully protesting the direction of the Democratic Party or supporting the McCarthy campaign. Images of policemen clubbing and manhandling news reporters and bystanders, and attacking and trashing McCarthy's 15th floor hotel headquarters, enhanced the impression of chaos. Humphrey eventually captured the nomination after a rumored challenge from Edward Kennedy failed to materialize. But Humphrey and running mate Edmund Muskie of Maine limped out of Chicago with a divided party (McCarthy would not throw his support to Humphrey until a week before election day) that was disorganized, broke, and more than 15 points behind the Republicans. Humphrey's initial statement in support of the police and Mayor Daley made things worse.

In order to get his campaign rolling, Humphrey persuaded Larry O'Brien, who had been running the Robert Kennedy campaign, to run his campaign as well as head the Democratic National Committee. This left top Humphrey campaign workers, as well as Mondale, Harris, and Freeman wondering about their true role. On top of this, in the first weeks of September probably no presidential candidate in U.S. history faced more heckling, abuse, sparse or hostile crowds, and negative publicity than did Hubert Humphrey.

In Seattle, in late September, Humphrey's campaign reached its nadir as a heckler demanded that Humphrey be tried before the United Nations as a war criminal. Humphrey finally realized he had to visibly break with the Johnson administration's policy on Vietnam in order to have any chance at the presidency. In a speech in Salt Lake City on September 30, Humphrey proposed a halt to the bombing of North Vietnam. Having shed his cheer-leading vice president image, he was able to go on the offensive. He attacked George Wallace as a dangerous extremist and an enemy of organized labor. Labor leaders, concerned that rank and file support of Wallace was undermining their leadership and position, threw their organizations' money and support behind Humphrey. Organized labor registered thousands of new voters, helped win several Northeastern states, and almost turned the election. Humphrey's attacks on Nixon also began affecting traditional Democratic voters as he contrasted his own New Deal, Great Society, and civil rights record with Nixon's. To counter the national Harris and Gallup polls, the Democratic National Committee conducted its own polls, which showed Humphrey gaining on Nixon week by week.

Unfortunately time ran out on Hubert Humphrey. Election returns gave Nixon a victory by slightly more than 500,000 votes nationwide (43.4 % for Nixon to 42.7% for Humphrey to 13.5 % for Wallace). Electoral college results were not as close: 301 to 191 to 46, with Nixon winning the big states of California, Illinois, and Texas. Historians will long debate why Humphrey lost this watershed election. Many people feel that with one more week of campaigning Humphrey would have been elected president. Lack of money at crucial times, organizational difficulties, and lack of party leadership in Texas and California also are mentioned. Humphrey's refusal to disclose the "China surprise" (Anna Chennault had persuaded the South Vietnamese to not join the Paris peace talks, convincing them they would get a better deal from a Nixon administration) may have been statesmanlike but also may have cost him the election. Nixon's emphasis on "law and order" and Humphrey's apparent softness on the issue also may have hurt. In the end, Humphrey could not distance himself enough from the widely discredited Johnson administration Vietnam policy. The American people wanted change, and Humphrey was a symbol of the past.

SCOPE AND CONTENTS

The majority of the materials in these files date from April, 1968, when Humphrey announced his candidacy for President, through the post-election days in November. The heaviest concentration is found in the period preceding and during the Democratic national convention in August. Some pre-campaign materials are found throughout; they were used for research or as sources of data. The aftermath of Humphrey's defeat and possible options for the future are expressed in the letters and other materials for December 1968 and early 1969.

Humphrey's Minneapolis and Washington office staffs and those of the United Democrats for Humphrey, Citizens for Humphrey, Women for Humphrey, and the Democratic National Committee carried out the day-to-day routine work such as handling correspondence (much of which was answered by Robotype machine), producing brochures and special campaign materials, planning the national convention in Chicago, making arrangements for personal appearances, contacting persons and companies for contributions and volunteer services, sponsoring fund-raising events, keeping Humphrey abreast of current happenings, supplying information to the media, and orchestrating the all-out effort for his election.

The staff research people, most of whom had expertise in particular subject fields, were called upon to furnish information on such major issues as the Vietnam War, law and order, race relations, and the economic and social areas of poverty, education, and rural/urban balance. This information was used for speeches, news releases and statements, and answers to questions from the general public.

Newspaper clippings in which Humphrey is quoted or mentioned or that directly involve issues of concern to him, as well as those relating to his speaking engagements, form a part of these files. Most of the publications about Humphrey have been combined with printed matter from the Humphrey organizations and others into a single set of "printed materials."

Two sets of correspondence files (PAF 1 - PAF 3.2 and PAF 20) contain coding similar to that used by the Humphrey office for the vice presidential files. The Humphrey office coding manual did not include an identification for PAF 20, which may have been used for Robotype answers to letters.

DETAILED DESCRIPTION

Note to Researchers: To request materials, please note the location shown below. Inconsistencies may be found on "reused" folder labels; use the information in the following list for citation purposes.

Each entry in the list below comprises one file folder, unless noted otherwise.

Series 1. Candidate Files, 1949-1968. 3.25 cu. ft. (3 boxes and 1 partial box).

Newspaper clippings, articles, news releases, personal and background data, miscellaneous mimeographed and printed materials, and other political items written by or relating to Republican and Democratic candidates for the presidency and vice presidency in the 1968 campaign, arranged alphabetically by candidate name. In addition to Humphrey, the most substantive files are for Lyndon B. Johnson, Robert F. Kennedy, Eugene J. McCarthy, Richard M. Nixon, Strom Thurmond, and George C. Wallace. Occasionally the candidates' personal stands on some of the political issues are specified. Three folders contain a comparative study made of the voting records of Nixon and Humphrey on selected issues.

Series 2. Citizens for Humphrey, 1968. 16.5 cu. ft. (16 boxes, 1 partial box).

The Citizens for Humphrey files contain materials issued by or received by the organization's national office during 1968. David Ginsburg and Robert Short were co-chairmen, Julius Cahn was deputy chairman, and Kenneth Birkhead was executive director. All aspects of the campaign are represented: requests for materials, songs, finances, founding members data, personnel, polls, press and public relations, regional and state activities, schedules, and reports.

The largest segment of this series is composed of "Groups," consisting of correspondence, telegrams, contributors' records, reports, membership lists and cards, and other material relating to each of the many ethnic, occupational, and other special groups that actively worked as components of Citizens for Humphrey.

Arrangement: Alphabetical by general topic or record type.

Series 3. Contributors, 1968. 1.0 cu. ft. (1 box).

Material relating to campaign contributors, consolidated from files found with the Citizens for Humphrey and the United Democrats for Humphrey records.

From the Citizens for Humphrey office is correspondence and miscellany, arranged chronologically, containing letters in which donations were enclosed, thank-you letters for contributions received, and lists of names and amounts contributed. Democratic Party donor cards, and thank-you letters for contributions received from Westinghouse Electric Corporation employees through its Westinghouse Citizenship Program, are also part of this unit. Packages of cards, arranged alphabetically, and unsorted envelopes give donor's name, address, and amount of contribution.

From the United Democrats for Humphrey office are six packages of cards for contributors, contacts, and subjects.

Series 4. Correspondence: Coded Files, April 1968 - January 1969. 18.0 cu. ft. (18 boxes).

Letters and telegrams relating to the overall operation of the campaign and mobilization of campaign workers, and expressions of support for and opposition to Humphrey as a candidate. Most are from members of the general public or campaign workers. Arranged by code number (PAF 1 - PAF 3.2; PAF 20) assigned by the Humphrey office, and thereunder alphabetically by correspondent's name or chronologically.

Codes PAF 1 to PAF 1.3 concern such general campaign matters as convention strategy, nomination, selection of a vice presidential candidate, issues, contributors, workers, supporters, and the election itself.

The PAF 3.1 files are "pro Humphrey." All races, religions, and professions from the fifty states and some foreign countries are represented, offering congratulations, ideas, and suggestions on campaign issues and events, or their services as volunteers, supporters, and contributors.

The PAF 3.2 files are "anti Humphrey." The majority relate to the police brutality and the tactics in general used in conducting the Democratic national convention in Chicago, as well as expressing opposition to Chicago mayor Richard Daley, the Vietnam war, and the seizure of the USS Pueblo and the imprisonment of its crew by North Korea. Robotype-machine form letters were used in responding to most of these letters.

The PAF 20 files comprise general campaign letters, expressing opinions on Humphrey's candidacy, campaign activities, and current political and social issues. Various notations on the letters suggest that they were the responsibility of Norman Holmes, probably while he was on the issues research staff of United Democrats for Humphrey. The letters were written to Humphrey from May through November, 1968, with the majority coming in July and August. Robotype responses were used for all letters received through August, and probably later, although no robo instruction forms accompanied the post-August files.

Pro-Humphrey PAF 20 letters offer suggestions and views on the selection of a running mate and urge that he take a stronger stand on such important campaign issues as the Vietnam war, peace, law and order, and gun registration. Anti-Humphrey correspondents advise him to withdraw from the race, generally on the grounds that his affiliation with President Lyndon B. Johnson is too strong and that the present administration is not solving the prevailing national problems of unemployment, war, conditions for Afro-Americans, and crime on the streets. Others object to the undemocratic selection of convention delegates in some states. Some letters are copies of those addressed to other public figures and editors of newspapers. Letters arriving in November, after the election, ask that continued efforts be made to find solutions to current problems.

Correspondence by State, May-November 1968. 0.5 cu. ft. (10 folders in partial box).

Letters with responses, relating public attitudes, political situations, and other relevant information from each state, along with assorted communications from campaign workers and supporters. Many of the responses are from William Welsh, administrative assistant to Humphrey, and from staff member Norris Ellertson.

Folder 10. Vermont, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Wyoming.

Correspondence, General, March-December 1968. 3.5 cu. ft. (3 boxes and 6 folders).

Letters and telegrams expressing support and encouragement, arranged by month and thereunder often divided topically. Many original songs and poems are included. Mailing lists for promotional use by staff members in the various campaign offices were probably created from this file. The responses to many of these letters and telegrams were done by robotype in the United Democrats for Humphrey office, or by Humphrey staff members Norman L. Holmes, Douglas J. Bennet, William Welsh, and Norris Ellertson.

At the end of the file is a folder containing telegrams expressing last-minute hope for Humphrey's victory (November 4-5) or condolences upon his defeat (November 6-7), with a copy of Humphrey's robotype response.

Related materials: Similar letters are in the "Correspondence: Coded Files" and "Contributors" series.

Lawrence O'Brien Files, Sept.-Nov. 1968. 2 boxes.

Letters, telegrams, memoranda, and newspaper clippings from staff members and other Democrats and from some Republicans, offering ideas, suggestions, comments, and criticism on all aspects of the campaign.

On August 30, 1968, following Humphrey's nomination for President, he asked O'Brien to serve as campaign manager and DNC chairman. O'Brien accepted with the stipulation that his term would end soon after the election, and he resigned on January 4, 1969.

- 150.G.5.2F Al Mark Files, 1965-1968. 0.25 cu. ft. (6 folders in partial box).
These files consist mainly of chronologically arranged interoffice memos, requests for information on government processes and for literature on past platforms, and calendars of pre-convention events (1967-May 1968, 5 folders). Copies of the Democratic Party information published and updated yearly in Grolier, Inc's Encyclopedia Year Book (1965-1968, 1 folder) are also included. The research and information department's duty was to have available source materials on such matters as critical issues, state and congressional districts, candidates, voting statistics, conventions, delegates, basic partisan material, special interests, mailing lists, and the Republican hopefuls' positions on issues. However, these files by and large do not reflect this function.

Series 7. Democratic National Convention, 1967-1968. 3.75 cu. ft. (3 boxes, 1 partial box).

These files document details of organizing, planning and conducting the day-to-day activities of the 1968 Democratic National Convention, held in Chicago on August 26-29.

Subject files (1 box) document such matters as arrangements for hotel accommodations, press and communications preparations, lists and biographical information on convention delegates, releases of Humphrey's ideas on key issues, activities of various convention committees, and daily convention schedules and events. Members of the Democratic National Committee (with John M. Bailey as chairman through August 29), state delegates, and staff of United Democrats for Humphrey were chiefly responsible for most of these files.

Delegate information cards (2 boxes) list name, address, telephone number, occupation, race, and status (delegate or alternate) for each convention delegate.

A set of platform versions and drafts, supporting materials, and background data give insight into ideas and proposals for the 1968 Democratic Party platform. Drafts were prepared by Humphrey organization staff members, including speech writers and task force members, and by others with expertise in specific areas. One file is devoted specifically to development of the platform plank on the Vietnam War.

Series 8. Newspaper Clippings, 1964-1969. 9.1 cu. ft. (9 boxes and 2 folders).

These cover Humphrey's activities and national events leading up to, during, and after his 1968 presidential campaign. Clippings in boxes 1-7(part) are divided into two groups: those from individual states followed by those arranged by month. In boxes 7(remainder)-8 are an assortment of miscellany: a scrapbook of Humphrey-related clippings assembled by elementary school student Jane Leussler, political newspapers, mimeographed compilations of "Daily News Clips" (May-October) and "Weekly News Clips" (September-October), and a few subject files of clippings and magazine articles. "HHH on the Move" (box 9) comprises packets of clippings relating to specific speaking engagements. A set of "Political News Summary" (2 folders) comprises mimeographed copies of daily excerpts of political news extracted from the news media, issued by the Public Information/Affairs Office of United Democrats for Letters, memos, telegrams, releases, lists, reports, proposals, and other current information, critical to the conduct of the campaign and classified by the campaign office as "personal." They focus on responses to, from, or about key individuals and/or subjects of vital importance politically, and were compiled by campaign personnel and staff people for Humphrey's own use. The bulk of the material is concentrated from May to November, 1968.

Series 10. Research Files, 1952-1969. 13.5 cu. ft. (12 boxes, 3 partial boxes).

Background materials compiled by Humphrey's research and speech writing staffs. They comprise three sub-units: (a) Coded Files (2 cu. ft.): a selection of printed materials, newspaper clippings, magazine articles, news releases, and a few letters and memos used by the Humphrey office staff; the office assigned file code numbers for accessibility. (b) Miscellaneous Background Data (0.75 cu. ft.), presumably also used by various staff members: they focus on issues at the Democratic National Convention, particularly comparative Democratic-Republican platforms for the years 1952-1964. (c) Issues and Speech Research by Individuals (10.75 cu. ft.): an assemblage of correspondence, memoranda, reports, printed materials, statements, drafts of speeches, and other material, created and used primarily by staff members responsible for the preparation of speeches and communications. Some data, such as that used in comparative studies or to document changes in attitudes or circumstances, predates the 1968 campaign.

The speech writers represented in these files are: Douglas J. Bennet, chief speech writer; Norman L. Holmes, general research; John E. Rielly, foreign policy; John G. Stewart, domestic issues; Ted Van Dyk, coordinator of all speech writing and communications; and William Welsh, various councils, marine science, space, and domestic issues.

Series 11. Staff Files: William Connell and Eiler Ravnholt, 1963-1969 (bulk 1968). 5.0 cu. ft. (5 boxes).

Correspondence, memoranda, newspaper clippings, articles, reports, lists, and related miscellany from the offices of William Connell, executive assistant, and Eiler Ravnholt, assistant to Humphrey. Both men worked very closely with Humphrey, with the United Democrats for Humphrey staff, and with other campaign workers on all aspects of the 1968 campaign, as reflected in these files. Some material predates the 1968 campaign but evidently was collected and used for comparative research.

State Books, 1964-1971. 2.75 cu. ft. (2 boxes, 1 partial box).

The State Books, removed from loose-leaf binders and foldered, contain information relating to the political profile of each state, probably collected for campaign use. Generally, each folder is prefaced by a standardized table of; however, very few of the itemized sections or documents are actually present in any given file. Maps of congressional districts, names and addresses of delegates, lists of key and/or contact people and possible speakers, biographical data, registration data, and lists of district officers are examples of the materials to be found in these files.

Series 13. Task Force Files, 1968. 6.0 cu. ft. (6 boxes).

The "Task Force," headed by Robert R. Nathan, was composed of individuals chosen for their expertise on key domestic and international issues. Its primary purpose was to meet immediate campaign information needs by supplying background material for speeches and articles, developing new ideas, and assisting with meetings and reports. The reports generated by these individuals formed the basis of the position papers issued by the Humphrey campaign office. There were three major task forces: domestic, economic, and foreign policy.

The Task Force Files were established during the period before the Democratic National Convention and continued up to the November election. They contain correspondence, memoranda, news release drafts, copies of statements and reports, informal essays on issues, drafts of answers to questionnaires from Fortune magazine, the New York Times, and Standard and Poor, and similar material collected by task force members.

Arrangement: Largely alphabetical within each of several categories: Administrative, Domestic, Foreign Policy, Miscellaneous, and Members. To simplify filing and access, the domestic and economic task force files have been interfiled alphabetically.

Advance Staff Files, 1964-1968. 3.0 cu. ft. (3 boxes).
Advance staff, coming to a city about seven days before Humphrey was scheduled to arrive and staying one day after his departure, were responsible for such details as local travel, movements through hotels, arrangements for a greeting committee and welcoming crowd, and all follow-up and related matters, coordinating everything with the U.S. Secret Service.
The files include copies of manuals and instructions; directories of advance staff; lists of hotels; correspondence and miscellany containing recommendations for advance staff, suggestions, requests, and similar matters; a list of Humphrey's out-of-town engagements for 1964-1968; and advance schedules, including election night (November 4) in Minneapolis. Much of the materials originated with or was sent to Martin McNamara or Lawrence Hayes. Material about or directed to a particular person can be found in the alphabetically arranged personal files that comprise the largest portion of this series.

 These files cover a wide scope of campaign activities that involved the UDH or were of importance and interest to them, including finances, convention logistics, political and election strategies, and communications. Much of the material was issued or received by Robert McCandless, UDH director of delegate operations until September 13, 1968, when he became national director of organization for the Humphrey-Muskie campaign.

Correspondence and miscellany, newspaper clippings, newsletters, and magazine articles accumulated by the Minnesota UDH office; Wendell Anderson was its executive director. There are many letters from individuals offering to volunteer their services and from students seeking direction in organizing support groups; names of active workers; circular memos from the national headquarters; requests for information on Humphrey's ideas and on promotional materials; and reports from telephone committees. The majority of the newsletters were issued by the Minnesota Young American Council of the UDH and by the YDFL Federation.

Democratic National Convention Delegates, 1966-1968. 5.5 cu. ft. (5 boxes, 1 partial box).

The majority of this series consists of correspondence, memoranda, reports, lists, newspaper clippings, and miscellany, arranged by state and pertaining to current happenings and the status of each state's committees and delegates to the 1968 convention. Also included are forms recording background information on each delegate. For some states, a small quantity of material for 1966-1967, consisting mainly of photocopies of information on prior situations, is also included.

Also part of this series are general materials on convention delegates and committees; charts kept at UDH headquarters to track the progress of the state-level conventions and delegate outlook, contacts, comments, and action needed; and arrangement details for receptions held in Washington, D.C. for the Delaware and Maryland delegates, May 1968.

Location

150.F.18.5B General Election Campaign Notebook, 1968. 1 folder.
 A set of memoranda assessing the needs and recommending strategies to be pursued in policies, personnel, issues, schedules, and organization for Humphrey's post-convention election campaign. The compiler is unknown, although Orville Freeman was a creator or recipient of most of the memos.

150.F.18.3B Interviews, 1968. 2 folders.
 Copies of transcripts of interviews relating Humphrey's views on his senatorial days, President Lyndon B. Johnson, the Democratic national convention, selection of a running mate, and the 1968 presidential campaign and its issues, especially the Vietnam War. The interviewers are not always identified. Some of the transcripts are badly deteriorating Dennison copies.

- 150.G.6.3B Invitations, Dec. 1967 - 1968. 1.0 cu. ft. (1 box).
Three groups of correspondence and miscellany relating to invitations for personal appearances tendered to Humphrey by individuals, schools, and organizations. The first group appears to cover invitations to functions throughout the United States except Washington, D.C. Many responses to these were handled by James E. Thornton, director of scheduling, or by other staff members on the scheduling committee. Invitations to Washington, D.C. events comprise the second group; most communications seem to be conducted by Barbara Ramsey, appointments secretary.
Declined invitations comprise the third group; some responses to these are by D. Michael Murray, Speakers Bureau director.
