

Harlan Bolce to James J. Hill.

"My brief talk with you in New York convinced me that the series of articles on the development of our western country and the awakening of Asia, which I am to write for the Booklovers Magazine of Philadelphia, would be very incomplete without a full story of your vital part in this international trade movement. I therefore take more than ordinary pleasure in accepting your invitation to call on you in St. Paul."

General correspondence by date