Farrer to Hill

"I have sketched out to Lord Mount Stephen your ideas of the future of the Holding Company with the share capital eventually absorbing all Great Northern and Northern Pacific shares, as well as the Bonds issued for the Burlington purchase. He is pleased with the simplicity and breadth of the scheme - but is impressed with the desirability of making an early effort to secure new markets; and so increase the number of the faithful. He concurs with you in thinking that, out of this country, there are no better holders than the New England investor." Suggests Kidder, Peabody & Co. Boston to reach this class, and "John [Sterling] tells me, that Winsor

is the live man - and a very live man too,- in that concern."
