

M 182A      National Nonpartisan League. Printed Materials, undated and 1910-1928.
             4 rolls positive microfilm. Originals in the Minnesota Historical Society.
             Collation of the originals: 2.5 feet.

This microfilm reproduces printed materials (undated and 1910-1928) relating to the National Nonpartisan League. It is a valuable supplement to the microfilm edition of the League's records issued by the Minnesota Historical Society in 1969. Although some items in this edition were filmed in their entirety in the 1969 edition, and the title pages of many others were included as a bibliographic aid, much of the material in this edition does not appear in the earlier edition.

HISTORICAL SKETCH

The National Nonpartisan League, a political protest organization of farmers and workers, was organized in North Dakota in 1915 to combat economic and political exploitation of spring-wheat farmers; it spread rapidly through the midwestern and northwestern states during the early years of World War I. The League's reform program was heavily socialistic, and the organization encountered intense opposition, led by forces that felt threatened by its success. Prior to the United States' entry into World War I, these opponents attempted to discredit the League by accusing its leaders of being socialists, anarchists, and members of the Industrial Workers of the World. Following the nation's entry into the war, they attempted to brand the organization and its followers disloyal, seditious, and pro-German. During the post-war "Red Scare," they again returned to their pre-war themes. The League declined almost as rapidly as it had risen and by 1924 no longer existed as a national organization. However, its influence continued to be felt in many states, notably North Dakota and Minnesota. In Minnesota the League was the forerunner of the Farmer-Labor and Democratic-Farmer-Labor parties.

DESCRIPTION OF THE RECORDS

The materials included in this microfilm edition consist of pamphlets, newspapers, and books. Most of the pamphlets, which constitute the bulk of the materials, document the "pamphlet war" between the League and its supporters and its opponents. They are arranged in the following series:

- League, pro-League, and Farmer-Labor publications;
- Anti-League, anti-socialist, and loyalty publications;
- Government publications;
- Legal publications;
- Miscellaneous publications.

The pamphlets in each series are arranged chronologically by year of publication; they are arranged alphabetically by main entry (author or title) within each year. The newspapers are arranged alphabetically by title. The books are arranged alphabetically by author.

Most of the original items are located in the Minnesota Historical Society's Reference Library. Some, however, are from the following collections in the Division of Archives and Manuscripts: Elmer E. Adams Papers, Joseph A.A. Burnquist Papers, Arthur LeSueur Papers, National Nonpartisan League Papers, and Jacob A.O. Preus Papers.

For additional information about the Nonpartisan League and its records see Deborah K. Neubeck, Guide to a Microfilm Edition of the National Nonpartisan League Papers (Minnesota Historical Society, 1970). For manuscripts and other publications pertaining to the League see the card catalogs of the Division of Archives and Manuscripts and the Reference Library.

A supplement to this microfilm edition, consisting of four pamphlets discovered in the Society's Reference Library after the other materials had been filmed, appears on Roll 4, beginning at frame 1159.
