Physical Details	713 microfilm reels ; 16 mm.
Arrangement	Arranged by year of death, and thereunder by certificate number.
Summary	Death certificates and, occasionally, other documents containing information on deaths that occurred in Minnesota during the years 1908-1955. Each certificate gives some or all of the following information: certificate number; place of death (county and township, village, or city); full name of the deceased; date of death; decedent's sex, color or race, age, date and place (state or country) of birth, length of residence in the United States if foreign born, country of citizenship, usual residence, marital status, usual occupation, social security number, and military service status; spouse's name; father's name and birthplace; mother's full maiden name and birthplace; name and address of the person providing personal information about the deceased; immediate (primary) and contributing causes of death and the duration of each; name and address of the physician or official submitting the information about the death; place, date, and location of burial, cremation, or removal; name and address of the mortician and/or funeral director; and date when the certificate was filed. The certificate numbers were assigned retrospectively at the end of each year (1908-1964) or each month (1965-2001) by the Health Department and correspond to the following arrangement: within each year, 1908-1962, alphabetical by county, thereunder alphabetical by civil subdivision (townships, villages, and cities) (followed by unorganized areas identified by township and range numbers), and thereunder chronological by date of death; within each year, 1963-1964, alphabetical by county and thereunder by date of death without regard to civil subdivision; and within each month, 1965-2001, alphabetical by county and thereunder by date of death without regard to civil subdivision. Certificates for the cities of Minneapolis, St. Paul, and Duluth (in this order, 1908-1980) follow the county sequence for each year or each month; certificates for each city are chronological by date of death. Beginning in 1981 certificates for these cities are interfiled with other certificates for their respective counties by date of death. Certificates for 2001 are incomplete.

DESCRIPTION OF THE DEATH CERTIFICATES

This microfilm reproduces the official certificates and, occasionally, supplementary documents for deaths and stillbirths that occurred in Minnesota during the years 1908-1955. A personal name electronic index to the certificates is available at the Minnesota Historical Society's website (<http://people.mnhs.org/dci/Search.cfm/>).

Historical Background

Beginning in 1908 local registrars of the state's primary registration districts (township, village, and city clerks or health officers) and/or, beginning in 1946, county clerks of court were required by state law¹ to fill out Certificate of Death forms or, when appropriate (beginning in 1946), Certificates of Stillbirth forms, for all deaths and stillbirths occurring in their jurisdictions and to forward them to the state registrar at the State Board of Health's Division of Vital Statistics. The transmitted copies constitute the official state record.

The Division of Vital Statistics (administratively part of the State Department of Health, the operating agency for the State Board of Health) was responsible for the general supervision of the state registration system for births, deaths, and stillbirths. Printed certificate forms were prepared by the division and distributed to local registrars. Their content, which was mandated by state statute, was based on standard certificates of death as recommended by the United States Bureau of the Census, subject to the approval of and modification by the State Board of Health.

Occasionally, a document entitled Return (or Report) of a Death (an earlier version of the Certificate of Death), a Coroner's Certificate of Death, or a Bureau of the Census Standard Certificate of Death was sent to the state by a local registrar in place of a Certificate of Death. Although this practice occurred most frequently in the years immediately following 1908, when the system for sending certificates to the state registrar was just getting underway, it continued for many years thereafter. All of these documents functioned as official death certificates.

Arrangement

The death and stillbirth certificates are arranged by single year and within each year by certificate number, in a single numerical sequence beginning with certificate number 1. A certificate number was assigned to and stamped on each certificate in its upper right corner after all the certificates for that year had been arranged by place and date of death in the following manner: alphabetically by county; thereunder alphabetically by civil subdivision (legally organized townships, villages, and cities), followed by the county's unorganized area/territory; and thereunder chronologically by date (month, day, and year) of death. Certificates for the cities of Minneapolis, St. Paul, and Duluth (in this order in most years) follow the certificates for Yellow Medicine County at the end of the county sequence for each year. The certificates for each of these three cities also are filed in chronological order by date of death.

Researchers should be aware of the following anomalies in the records when searching for a particular death or stillbirth certificate with or without a citation from the electronic death certificate index:

- The certificates were not checked for precise numerical order prior to microfilming. There may be more than one certificate with the same certificate number and gaps in the sequence of certificate numbers. Some certificates may have more than one stamped number, as well as a handwritten number or numbers, in the upper right and left corners. The origin and meaning of some of these non-certificate numbers are not known.
- Not all of Minnesota's 87 counties were established by 1908. Pennington County was formed from Red Lake County in 1910, and Lake of the Woods County was formed from Beltrami County in 1922. Researchers should search for certificates filed under the "parent" counties for death records that precede the establishment of the more recently organized counties. Certificates for McLeod County are filed following those for Lyon County in some years but following those for Martin County in other years.

- Certificates for the cities of Minneapolis, St. Paul, and Duluth are filed in this order in all years except 1908, when their filing order is Minneapolis, Duluth, St. Paul.
- The legal status, boundaries, and names of some counties, townships, villages, cities, and unorganized areas/territory changed over time.²
- Unorganized areas not yet legally organized and, therefore, not yet officially named, usually, but not always, are identified by the phrase “unorganized territory” and/or by township and range numbers, even if they were known colloquially by a proper name during the years preceding their official formation.
- The filing order of certificates for townships and villages or cities with the same proper name may not be consistent, i.e., in some instances certificates for the township may be filed before those for the village or city, while in other instances certificates for the village or city may appear before those for the township.
- When there is more than one certificate for the same date in a particular locality, the certificates may or may not be in alphabetical order by decedent surname and given name.
- Although most certificates are filed under the place of death, a few may be filed under the decedent’s place of residence.
- Ojibwe Indian reservations generally are located in unorganized territory. Certificates for Native Americans whose deaths occurred on these reservations in the years closely following 1908 generally are filed in a county’s unorganized territory section, with the place of death variously identified by township and range numbers, reservation name, or simply by the word “reservation.” In later years, however, these certificates usually are filed by reservation name in a county’s alphabetical civil subdivision sequence. Certificates for Indians who died in a civil subdivision located within the boundaries of an “open” reservation may be filed under the civil subdivision’s name rather than under the reservation name; certificates for those whose deaths occurred in an unorganized area of a reservation generally are filed under the reservation name. Certificates for the Nett Lake reservation, which is located in both
- Koochiching and St. Louis counties, are filed together in each year, sometimes in

² The publications listed in Appendix B (p. 9) are helpful in identifying these changes.

Koochiching County and sometimes in St. Louis County. Dakota Indian communities, which are not reservations, may be either unorganized area/territory or organized civil subdivisions. Certificates for deaths occurring in these communities are filed accordingly.

- Certificates for deaths that occurred at the Fort Snelling Military Reservation in the years immediately following 1908 usually are filed as Unorganized Territory-Fort Snelling, in Hennepin County in some years and in Ramsey County in other years. Eventually they are filed consistently in Hennepin County, either in the alphabetical sequence as Fort Snelling or following it as Unorganized Territory-Fort Snelling. By the late 1920s they are routinely filed in the alphabetical sequence as Fort Snelling Military Reservation and include deaths that occurred at the Veterans Administration Hospital.

Due to these potential difficulties, researchers who do not find a certificate with the number and/or name they are looking for in the expected numerical and/or geographical sequence should search the microfilm further.

Contents

The informational categories in each Certificate of Death vary somewhat depending on the time period but generally include many of the categories listed below. Not all forms are filled out completely, primarily because informants did not know the information. Additionally, many forms for the cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul for the years 1908-1912 were not filled out completely by local registrars. Each certificate includes some or all of the following information:

- certificate number; “registered number” (the number assigned by the local registrar when the death was originally recorded); registration district number;
- place of death in Minnesota: county; township, village, or city; length of stay at the place where death occurred; name of the hospital or institution or, if elsewhere, the street address;
- usual residence of the deceased (if an institution, place of residence prior to admission): state; county; township, village, or city; post office address; length of residence in the United States if foreign born;
- full name of the deceased;

- date (month, day, year) and time of death;
- deceased's sex, color or race (and, occasionally, tribal affiliation and blood quantum of Native Americans), age, marital status and, if married, age at marriage and number of children, date and place (state or foreign country) of birth, country of citizenship, usual occupation, and social security number; spouse's name and (if alive), age, father's name and birthplace, and mother's full maiden name and birthplace; whether deceased was a veteran and, if so, the war in which he or she served or the dates of service;
- signature and address of the person providing the information about the decedent;
- medical certification: immediate (primary) natural cause of death (disease or condition leading directly to the death), antecedent causes, other significant contributory factors and conditions, and the duration of each;³ place where a disease was contracted if not at the place of death; date and major findings of an operation and/or autopsy; additional information on a death due to other than natural causes—whether it was an accident, suicide, or homicide; where an injury occurred (including city/village/township, county, and state); date and time; how it occurred, and whether it occurred at work—; inclusive dates the physician submitting information about the death attended the deceased, physician's or official's signature and address, and date of submission;
- whether a burial, cremation, or removal occurred; its date and place; name and location of the cemetery and the burial plot number or name and location of the crematory; signature and address of the undertaker, funeral director, or embalmer and/or name of the firm handling the arrangements;
- date certificate was filed by and signature of the local registrar; date certificate was received at the Minnesota Department of Health.

³ Appendix C (p. 10) lists archaic terms for many medical conditions and diseases and their modern names or definitions.

Each Return or Report of a Death, Coroner's Certificate of Death, and Census Bureau Standard Certificate of Death include generally, but not entirely, the same information given in the Certificate of Death.

Each Certificate of Stillbirth includes information on the date and location of the stillbirth; usual residence of the mother; child's name, sex, and physical characteristics; father's name, color or race, age, birthplace; and usual occupation; mother's full maiden name, color or race, age, birthplace, and other children born to her; source of the preceding data; pregnancy, labor, and delivery; cause(s) of the stillbirth; person attending the birth; burial, cremation, or removal; and when the certificate was filed by the local registrar and received by the Department of Health.

In addition to the certificate there may be other documents relating to a particular death or stillbirth that give additional information on the individual and/or the death or stillbirth, including, for example, a transit permit issued in Minnesota or another state granting permission to remove the decedent's remains from the place of death to a place of burial, notations and more formal documents that provide additional medical data regarding the death, and correspondence. These supplementary items (or "attachments") generally are filmed following the certificate to which they pertain; in some instances, however, they may precede it. Therefore, researchers should examine the film frames adjacent to any frame containing an item relevant to their search. In some instances additional information about the death or stillbirth may be handwritten or typed on the reverse side of the certificate. The back of a certificate containing such information is filmed following the front of the certificate. The presence of attachments or information on the back of the certificate may be alluded to by the notation "see over" on the front of the certificate. If, despite this reference, there are no attachments and/or the reverse side of a certificate is blank or not filmed, either the attachments were not present at the time of filming or there was no supplemental information on the back of the certificate.

The Microfilm

Some certificate numbers may have been stamped on the certificates with a worn, lightly-inked stamp that produced extremely faint or illegible numerals on the original documents; these will be difficult to read or illegible on the microfilm. In order to facilitate use of the microfilm, the certificate number has been handwritten and enclosed in brackets in the upper right corner of selected certificates with extremely faint certificate numbers, notably those whose numbers end in zero in long runs of certificates with faint numbers.

Some filled-in information on the certificates may be difficult to read on the microfilm due to handwritten entries in faint and/or smudged or smeared pencil and/or ink; typed entries made with a worn typewriter ribbon or worn carbon paper; stamped entries made with a worn, lightly-inked stamp; water damage; and darkened tape used to repair tears and the discolored paper beneath it. These conditions can produce especially poor contrast between the color of the text and the color of the paper, making legible photographic reproduction especially difficult. In an effort to increase the legibility of the information on the microfilm, some certificates may be filmed more than once at different camera settings, with a target identifying the intentional duplicate exposure. Some information may be obliterated by ink stains or lost due to paper tears.

Certificates of Death and Certificates of Stillbirth for the counties and for the cities of Minneapolis, St. Paul, and Duluth are each preceded on the microfilm by an introductory target. A running target at the top of each film frame gives the microfilm frame number.
