ADMINISTRATIVE HISTORY OF THE IMMIGRATION BOARD

The Board of Immigration was established in 1867 to encourage immigration to the state [Laws 1867 s28]. The board consisted of ex-officio members Governor William H. Marshall and Secretary of State Henry C. Rogers; a third member, who served as secretary, was appointed by the governor. Hans Mattson, a lawyer and Swedish immigrant, was the board's first secretary. The board membership was twice increased [Laws 1871 c50; Laws 1879 c76]. It ceased operation in 1886.

The board was re-created in 1907 as the Minnesota State Board of Immigration [Laws 1790 c267]. There were three ex-officio members, the governor, state auditor, and secretary of state, who appointed two members for two-year terms. The board members then selected a salaried commissioner of immigration. The duties of the board were generally to facilitate and encourage the immigration of persons of "good moral character" to the state and to assist immigrants on their way to Minnesota. In that capacity it acted primarily as an information service, collecting and disseminating information about Minnesota's agricultural, industrial, and commercial opportunities. It published books, brochures, pamphlets, and maps in English, French, German, Irish, Welsh, Dutch, Swedish, Norwegian, and Danish. Many of the publications advertised Minnesota public lands available for homesteading. It received an appropriation from the state, but also solicited contributions and endowments.

In 1925, the Conservation Department assumed the duties of the board and the board and the office of commissioner of immigration were abolished [Laws 1925 c246 art 4, 28].

List of Commissioners of Immigration: George Welsh, 1907-1911; H. J. Maxfield, 1912-1913; Fred D. Sherman, 1913-1920; J. S. Arenson, 1920-1921; Oscar H. Smith, 1921-1925.

SCOPE AND CONTENTS OF THE RECORDS

The biennial reports (1908-1922) detail the activities and organization of the board and depict the state's climate, crops and livestock, population, schools and churches, and land available and land sold for homesteads; the correspondence (1911), of Commissioner George Welsh, includes a request for U. S. Senator Knute Nelson's aid in the resolution of disputed or questionable titles to Chippewa [Ojibwa] Indian lands; and the printed materials (1881-1925) relate to such topics as agriculture, manufacturing, the state's fiftieth anniversary, mining, industry, the Red River Valley, a series of promotional addresses on radio station WLAG, and the resources in each of the state's counties.

Most of the letters in the correspondence are photocopies substituted for deteriorated originals.
