

Tonight I am opening the second phase of my campaign for the office of mayor of Minneapolis. A week ago yesterday the people of Minneapolis nominated me for this high office after a campaign in which responsible people in all sections of the community rallied to my support.

The results of the primary were extremely gratifying to me and I wish at this time to extend to the people of Minneapolis my most sincere thanks. And I wish to restate at this time that I shall, if elected, do everything in my power to justify the confidence that the people have placed in me.

While the large vote that I received was extremely gratifying to me personally, I am aware that this demonstration of support was not for me as an individual but for the program I have set forth.

This is as it should be. It is not the individual but the program and policies for which he stands that should command the attention and support of the voter.

I believe that the clear and decisive results of this campaign demonstrate that you -- the people of Minneapolis -- are interested in the problems facing our community and that you desire to support a program that will deal with these problems in a sound and constructive manner.

The people of Minneapolis do not want a campaign based upon personalities and mud slinging, innuendoes and half-truths. They want a campaign that is conducted on a high level of sound and constructive discussion of the broad fundamental problems confronting our community.

During the primary, I made every effort to conduct my campaign on this high level and urged all of my supporters to do the same. I pledge to you tonight that in the three weeks that remain between now and the general election, I will continue to discuss the important issues.

As I have stated before, I want this campaign to be informative and educational. I view this campaign as an educational forum, directed to the objective of promoting an intelligent understanding of the problems of our city government.

I propose to discuss issues not personalities. I propose to present facts, not fancies. I propose to present a program of action looking to the future and not to the mistakes and sins of the past.

Therefore, in my radio talks between now and June 11 I wish to discuss with you the problems of post-war employment, housing, industrial expansion, labor relations, city finances and the building of our city into a greater Minneapolis.

I know that the people of Minneapolis wish to see this city clean and our government efficient. Government responsible to the people will do this job but you the people must be militant in your support of a candidate who is willing to fight for what he knows to be right.

To my supporters, who are naturally elated by the outcome of the primary election, I wish to say our fight to improve Minneapolis city government is not yet won. You must redouble your efforts in order to insure our victory in the general election.

I say our victory because I, as the candidate, am important only to the extent that I represent the kind of program that justifies your support.

I am aware that the vote which was given me in the primary was due not to my own efforts but to the efforts of the hundreds of active supporters who gave of their time and energy in behalf of our program.

Our victory was made possible because our program had the support of persons and organizations representing all groups within the community. I am sorry that I am not able to thank individually each of the persons who took an active part in my campaign but I do want at this time to express my appreciation to them and to the many organizations that worked so hard in behalf of our program.

I want to thank the more than 500 people who are members of the Humphrey for Mayor Volunteer Committee. Members of this committee are drawn from business, labor, the professions, the clergy, the teachers and the Republican and Democratic parties.

I want to thank the many veterans of World War I and II who worked so hard in support of our program. Of the many endorsements that have been extended none are so gratifying to me as those received from veterans organizations. I want, therefore, to take this opportunity to thank especially the Veterans Committee on Good Government, the United Veterans of America, and the Campus Humphrey for Mayor Veterans Committee for their endorsement and the active work they are doing in behalf of our program.

I want to thank the members of the American Federation of Labor, the Congress of Industrial Organization, and the Railroad Brotherhoods both for their endorsement and for their united efforts in behalf of our program. It is reassuring to all those who believe in democratic government to see the active interest in sound and constructive government that is being taken by the working men and women of Minneapolis, and I am proud that they along with business, veteran and other organizations have been so active in support of my candidacy.

I want to thank the many business and professional men in Minneapolis who took time to work actively in behalf of our program. To join with the united labor movement of Minneapolis in working for a program of civic betterment is one of the best evidences that Minneapolis is going to be able to deal effectively with the problems that lie ahead. Close and harmonious cooperation of business and labor is essential to democratic government and that we have this kind of cooperation in Minneapolis is very heartening.

In fact, this widespread support from business, labor, professional, veterans and other civic-minded groups is one of the best evidences that the people of Minneapolis have observed the non-partisan feature of this election. They recognize, as I do, and as my supporters do that the mayor of Minneapolis must not represent just business or just labor or just the Republicans or just the Democrats -- but all the people in the city who are dedicated to a sound program for building a greater Minneapolis.

In the remaining time that I have tonight, let me discuss the broad context in which this campaign is set. These are not ordinary times. These are days of great decision. Victory has been won in Europe and our armed forces are marching on to inevitable victory in the Pacific. The military and political unity which has made these victories possible must be carried on after victory to ensure the building of a permanent and effective international organization to keep the peace.

An election in the midst of these important and dramatic developments imposes great responsibilities upon all of us. These events impose upon us the responsibility of steeping ourselves in the democratic faith, of making democracy real at home.

It is our responsibility to give concrete expression to the ideal of democracy by improving our political, economic and social institutions. It is the responsibility of every adult citizen to participate in our political life. Democracy can be meaningful only if government is responsive to the needs and desires of the great mass of people.

A democratic government cannot afford to have great sections of its population in poverty and unemployment, living in slums and insecurity.

A democratic government cannot afford the exploitation of man by man. A world constructed on democratic principles must be a world that practices the brotherhood of all men on a local, national and international basis.

I say to you frankly and in all sincerity that in the remaining weeks of this campaign I shall continue to do my utmost to make our citizens aware of our community needs.

One of the most challenging of these needs is the need for positive and constructive leadership at all levels of government. We cannot afford to drift aimlessly in this critical period of our history. Nor do we need to do so.

Just recently on a tour of the East, I had the opportunity of visiting with Mayor LaGuardia of New York, Mayor Wilson Wyatt of Louisville, the former Mayor Lausche of Cleveland -- now governor -- of Ohio, and Mayor Bohn of Milwaukee. In my conversations with these men I learned that these cities had revitalized their governments and are dealing effectively with their community problems.

The pattern which has been set in these other cities can be followed in Minneapolis. Our government in Minneapolis needs to be revitalized. It needs the stimulation of new ideas to fight against the corrosion of indifference that has so long characterized the mayor's office.

It needs the type of community redevelopment that will provide jobs for returning veterans in the post-war, a housing program that will provide clean and wholesome living conditions and a number of other programs aimed at social and economic betterment. I have discussed these programs in my previous broadcasts and in future broadcasts I will discuss them in even greater detail.

I want to present these programs to you in detail because it is important that the people understand them fully if they are to be realized.

It is the mayor's office which must supply leadership in these matters but leadership without popular understanding and support will not do the job.

I know that the people of Minneapolis are interested in taking an active part in their government and, as mayor, I intend to give them an opportunity to do so.

Democracy is not merely an election day affair. The people must have an opportunity to participate in their government every day in the year. The mayor's office -- like all public offices in a democracy -- must not be shrouded with secrecy. The mayor's office must conduct its business in the full view of the people and it must have their cooperation, their help and their support.

It is on the basis of such a conception of democratic government that I am a candidate for mayor. I want, if elected, to conduct my administration on the basis of a firm belief that leadership by the mayor must be closely associated with an informed public which is given an opportunity to participate in the formulation of public policy.

If you believe in this kind of administration, if you believe in a positive and constructive program for our city, if you want good government, and if you are willing to play an active part in our city life, the government of Minneapolis can and will be restored to the people.

RADIO ADDRESS BY HUBERT H. HUMPHREY, CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR OF MPLS.
PREPARED FOR DELIVERY OVER WLOL, TUESDAY, MAY 22, 1945, 8:15 P.M.

Good evening - L

Tonight I am opening ^{the} second phase of my campaign for the office of mayor of Minneapolis. A week ago yesterday, ^{you,} the people of Minneapolis, nominated me for this high office after a campaign in which responsible people in all sections of the community rallied to my support.

The results of the primary were extremely gratifying. I wish at this time to extend to the people of Minneapolis my most sincere thanks. And I wish to restate that I shall, if elected, do everything in my power to justify the confidence that the ^{you} ~~people~~ have placed in me.

~~While the large vote that I received was extremely gratifying to me personally,~~ I am aware that this demonstration of support was not for me as an individual but for the program I have set forth.

This is as it should be. It is not the individual but the program and policies for which he stands that should command the attention and support of the voter. It is well for every candidate for public office to remember that he is but a representative of a set of principles or ideals. Success in an election is dependent upon the willingness of people who believe in good government to stand with and work with a candidate who will ~~vigorously~~ fight for those ideals and principles.

I believe that the clear and decisive results of this campaign demonstrate that you -- the people of Minneapolis -- are interested in the problems facing our community and that you desire to support a program ^{which} ~~that~~ will deal with these problems in a sound and constructive manner.

I am convinced that,

The people of Minneapolis do not want a campaign based upon personalities and mud slinging, innuendoes and half-truths. They want a campaign that is conducted on a high level of sound and constructive discussion of the broad fundamental problems confronting our community.

~~During the primary,~~ ^{Have} I ^{have} made every effort to conduct my campaign on this high level and ^{have} urged all of my supporters to do the same. I pledge to you tonight that in the three weeks that remain between now and the general election, I will continue to discuss the important issues.

As I have stated before, I want this campaign to be informative and educational. I view this campaign as an educational forum, directed to the objective of promoting an intelligent understanding of the problems of our city government.

I propose to discuss issues not personalities. I propose to present facts, not fancies. I propose to present a program of action looking to the future and not merely a recitation of the mistakes and sins of the past.

Therefore, in my radio talks between now and June 11 I wish to discuss with you the problems of postwar employment, housing, industrial expansion, labor relations, city finances, law enforcement, and the building of our city into a greater Minneapolis.

~~I know that~~ The people of Minneapolis are sick and tired of an irresponsible, hidden, and invisible power that seems to have a strangle hold on the mayor's office. ~~I know that~~ The people of Minneapolis want decent law enforcement, free of political, ^{and} special privileges. That, they can, they must, and they will have! Pause

~~I know that~~ The people of Minneapolis wish to see this city clean and our government efficient. Government responsible to the people will do this job but you the people must be militant in your support of a candidate who is willing to fight for what he knows to be right.

~~To my supporters, who are naturally elated by the outcome of the primary election, I wish to say~~ Our fight to improve Minneapolis city government is not yet won. ~~You~~ ^{WE} must redouble ~~our~~ ^{our} efforts in order to insure our victory in the general election ^{on June 11.}

I say our victory, because I, as the candidate, am important only to the extent that I represent the kind of program that justifies your support.

I am aware that the vote which was given me in the primary was due not to my own efforts alone, but to the efforts of the hundreds of active supporters who gave of their time and energy in behalf of our program.

Our victory was made possible because our program had the support of persons and organizations representing all groups within the community.

I am sorry that I am not able to thank individually each of the persons who took an active part in this campaign but I do want at this time to express my appreciation to them and to the many organizations that worked so hard in behalf of our program.

I want to thank the more than 500 people who are members of the Humphrey for Mayor Volunteer Committee. Members of this committee are drawn from business, labor, the professions, the clergy, the teachers and the Republican and Democratic-Farmer-Labor parties.

I want to thank the many veterans of World War I and II who worked so hard in support of our program. Of the many endorsements that have been extended none are so gratifying to me as those received from veterans organizations. I want, therefore, to take this opportunity to thank especially the Minneapolis Veterans Committee on Good government, the United Veterans of America, and the Campus Humphrey for Mayor Veterans Committee for their endorsement and the active work they are ^{giving} ~~doing~~ in behalf of our program.

I want to thank the members of the American Federation of Labor, the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and the Railroad Brotherhoods both for their endorsement and for their united efforts in behalf of our program. It is reassuring to all those who believe in democratic government to see the active interest in sound and constructive government that is being taken by the working men and women of Minneapolis, ~~and~~ I am proud that they along with business, veteran and other organizations have been so active in support of my candidacy.

I want to thank the many business and professional men in Minneapolis who took time to work actively in behalf of our program. To join with the united labor movement of Minneapolis in working for a program of civic betterment is one of the best evidences that Minneapolis is going to be able to deal effectively with the problems that lie ahead. Close ~~and~~ harmonious cooperation of business and labor is essential to democratic government and that we have this kind of cooperation in Minneapolis is very heartening.

In fact, this widespread support from business, labor, professional, veterans and other civic-minded groups is one of the best evidences that the people of Minneapolis have observed the non-partisan feature of this election. They recognize, as I do, and as my supporters do that the mayor of Minneapolis must not represent just business or just labor or just the Republicans or just the Democrats or Farmer-Laborites -- but the mayor must represent all the people in the city who are dedicated to a sound program for building a greater Minneapolis.

We must be community-minded. Minneapolis wants and needs a mayor that will be mayor for all the people -- a mayor who believes in the people -- a mayor who will serve all the people. I am aware of the public trust and responsibility that will be placed in me as mayor. That is the type of mayor labor wants. That is the type of mayor business wants. We have had too much of special privileges for special interests. One is not worthy of the respect and confidence of this community if he becomes a pawn of any special interest ~~whether it is business, labor or the racketeers.~~

In the remaining time that I have tonight, let me discuss the broad context in which this campaign is set. These are not ordinary times. These are days of great decision. Victory has been won in Europe and our armed forces are marching on to inevitable victory in the Pacific. The military and political unity which has made these victories possible must be carried on after victory to ensure the building of a better world.

We are going to have a part in building a better world and it must be a leading part. Military victory is but the first step in the process of attaining peace. The peace that you and I want; the peace that every human being hungers for is a living and dynamic thing.

Victory and peace mean more than just the end of the war. Victory and peace mean to all of us the return of loved ones, the end of suffering and want, or, as our late President once said, "freedom from want, freedom from fear, freedom of speech and freedom of conscience."

From time to time I have mentioned the relationship of Minneapolis to our state, to our nation and to our world. A city of 500,000 people, in the heart of the great Northwest, is a great factor in the American economy. We have all begun to sense the importance of our city as a great transportation and industrial center.

Our strategic geographic position places upon our city leaders and public officials a great responsibility for political and economic leadership. We must be prepared to move on to new fields of expansion and to explore all possibilities of growth.

It is our responsibility to give concrete expression to the ideal of democracy by improving our political, economic and social institutions. It is the responsibility of every adult citizen to participate in our political life. Democracy can be meaningful only if government is responsive to the needs and desires of the great mass of people.

A democratic government cannot afford to have great sections of its population in poverty and unemployment, living in slums and insecurity.

A democratic government cannot afford the exploitation of man by man. ~~A world constructed on democratic principles must be a world that practices the brotherhood of all men on a local, national and international basis.~~

I say to you frankly and in all sincerity that in the remaining weeks of this campaign I shall continue to do my utmost to make our citizens aware of our community needs.

One of the most challenging of these needs is the need for positive and constructive leadership at all levels of government.

We cannot afford to drift aimlessly in this critical period of our history. Nor do we need to do so.

I have had the opportunity of visiting with Mayor LaGuardia of New York, Mayor Wilson Wyatt of Louisville, the former Mayor Lausche of Cleveland -- now governor -- of Ohio, and Mayor Bohn of Milwaukee. In my conversations with these men I learned that these cities had revitalized their governments and are dealing effectively with their community problems.

The pattern which has been set in these other cities can be followed in Minneapolis. Our government in Minneapolis needs to be revitalized. It needs the stimulation of new ideas to fight against the corrosion of indifference that has so long characterized the mayor's office.

It needs the type of community redevelopment that will provide jobs for returning veterans in the post-war, a housing program that will provide clean and wholesome living conditions and a number of other programs aimed at social and economic betterment. I have discussed these programs in my previous broadcasts and in future broadcasts I will discuss them in even greater detail.

I want to present these programs to you in detail because it is important that the people understand them fully if they are to be realized.

It is the mayor's office which must supply leadership in these matters but leadership without popular understanding and support will not do the job.

I know that the people of Minneapolis are interested in taking an active part in their government and, as mayor, I intend to give them an opportunity to do so.

Democracy is not merely an election day affair. The people must have an opportunity to participate in their government every day in the year. The mayor's office -- like all public offices in a democracy - must not be shrouded with secrecy. The mayor's office must conduct its business in the full view of the people and it must have their cooperation, their help and their support.

It is on the basis of such a conception of democratic local government that I am a candidate for mayor. I want, if elected, to conduct my administration on the basis of a firm belief that leadership by the mayor must be closely associated with an informed public which is given an opportunity to participate in the formulation of public policy.

If you believe in this kind of administration, if you believe in a positive and constructive program for our city, if you want good and decent government, and if you are willing to play an active part in our city life, the government of Minneapolis can and will be restored to the people.

209 - Plasters
106 - Barbers
211 - Elect Workers 292
106 - Bld. Trade.
104 - Food & Candy
300 - Nurses

Minnesota Historical Society

Copyright in this digital version belongs to the Minnesota Historical Society and its content may not be copied without the copyright holder's express written permission. Users may print, download, link to, or email content, however, for individual use.

To request permission for commercial or educational use, please contact the Minnesota Historical Society.

www.mnhs.org