Tonight I propose that the nations

Year of Agricultural Progress

of the Western Hemisphere pool their efforts and skills for a "Year of Agricultural Progress" in Latin America.

Canada
Parliament

We must develop a determined and cooperative program in the coming year to modernize agricultural techniques and boost production in Latin American nations.

Let us mark the first anniversary of the "Alliance for Progress" by launching

Steph
Alliance

a dedicated effort to put Latin American agriculture firmly on the road to modernization and abundance.

This coming year should be more than a year of hope. It should be a year of solid achievement for Latin American agriculture.

Working through the Alliance for Progress, we can demonstrate what a free people in free societies can do to boost agricultural production.

By stimulating land reform, the development of farm cooperatives, the extension of farm credit systems and the establishment of rural electrification, we can help lift the people of Latin America from the valley of want to the peaks of abundance and progress.

The agricultural abundance of the United States is a proud achievement.

It is proof of what can be done by a free people who use their skills and energies effectively.

Our Success
Education

In this Hemisphere, we have the skills, the experts, the resources and the people to transform vast areas of lands from dust and swamp and jungle to fertile farms of food and fiber.

Agricultural leaders and experts throughout the Hemisphere should be enlisted to work together through the Alliance for Progress to stimulate agricultural modernization in underdeveloped areas of Latin America.

yes, L Progress in agriculture should receive top priority in the Alliance for Progress.

L We now know that collectivized agriculture has been a flat failure in Red China, the Soviet Union and now in Cuba.

L Agricultural developments in those three nations---including growing food shortages and unrest among the farmers--- offer glaring evidence of the failure of Communism to serve the people.

This week's decision to ration food in Cuba is a direct result of the aggressive and tyrannical policies of the Castro regime.

If Castro would stop acting like a small-time bully and allow Cuba to take a responsible place in the family of Western Hemisphere nations, the Cuban people would not face such staggering problems as food shortages and economic stagnation.

Tuesday's decision by Cuban Premier

Castro in Trouble

Castro to ration all basic foods---and other household necessities---throughout Cuba is an admission of failure. USSR. China

The United States should attempt immediately, through the Voice of America, to let the Cuban people know that such hardships as food rationing are unnecessary.
Such steps stem from the aggressive designs of Castro's regime.

✓ We should let the Cuban people know that they are the victims of the Castro regime. We should let them know that Castro is not hurting the United States or any part of Latin America, but that he is hurting and halting their own chances for prosperity and progress.

And - 2 The United States should attempt to determine whether or not there is real human suffering in Cuba today.

If widespread malnutrition or hunger exist or are imminent in Cuba now, such private organizations as CARE, Catholic Church Welfare Services - Lutheran Protestant Welfare Services or the Red Cross ~~might~~ will ~~will want to~~ come to the rescue of the Cuban people, despite the antagonistic policies of the Cuban government.

2 The people of the United States do have the spirit of "good neighbors" to the people of Cuba. We sympathize with them, despite the arrogance of the leaders of Castro Regime - of the Castro regime.

We offer progress through cooperation and freedom, not through collectivization and totalitarianism.
