col. Earl Johnson, Comm lem -CA Sume REMARKS OF WICE HUBERT H. HUMPHREY BREAKFAST MEETING now - "-1600 I am sure you know by now how proud I am of this fine young man we honor here today. You in Orlando can be proud of your space son, John Young. The entire nation is proud of the job he and Gus Grissom did just one month and one day ago. I think it was very considerate of John to venture into space within easy viewing distance of his entire hometown population. I was at Cape Kennedy when John began that historic journey with Gus Grissom. You migh

I started at Cape Kennedy when John and Gus began their space flight. I was with them later in Washington, then in New York and Third go, and now Orlando _ Somptoheur multility

nt Duko

Yes, I followed John and Gus' flight from the Mission Control Center at the Cape. And I intend to watch other Gemini and Apollo flights as our space programs bring us closer and closer to a landing on the moon.

This is a wonderful and impressive age we we have a are living in today. We are going to the moon. We are advancing the frontiers of science and technology. We are improving the lot of our own people here on earth.

A truly Great Society can have no barriers to man's progress, whether in space, in the classroom, in and a or at the polling place. And I think we are a nation great enough to conquer the depths of poverty as well as the far reaches of space. Our space program is setting the pace.

John, our best wishes. What you have done has been done by and for all Americans.

REMARKS OF VICE PRESIDENT

HUBERT H. HUMPHREY

ORLANDO, FLORIDA

æ . . .

APRIL 24, 1965

My good friends, it is on occasions such as these that I truly appreciate the blessings of liberty in our great country.

There is joy and exhiliration in being with my fellow citizens in an atmosphere of good fellowship.

We have so much in this country to be thankful for. For the natural beauty of our countryside, our lakes, our rivers, our mountains ... for the creative energy which bursts from our cities ... for the talents of our people. I wish every citizen in America could be here today at this occasion. I wish every citizen here could be present at other such occasions ... in Texas, Colorado, Minnesota, in New England ... being held throughout the year in this land.

I am chairman of President Johnson's government task force on travel. That task force is now working to encourage more foreign visitors to come to the United States and to encourage, as well, our own American citizens to see and know the United States.

Did you know that more than half our people have never been more than 200 miles from home?

In this age of jet airplanes and rapid communications, this seems almost impossible, but it is true.

- 2 -

21

I think we Americans ought to travel more, not only for the economic benefit it will bring the country and all the parts of private industry that benefit from travel, but for a far more important reason:

You cannot travel in this country, or anywhere else, without gaining a better knowledge and understanding of your fellow-man. Knowledge is the best antidote to fear and prejudice.

A wise man once said that travel softens prejudice. It does more than that. It transforms prejudice to understanding.

We all know the difficulties our country has been going through recently. In a time of rapid social and economic change, we have found some of our people pitted against others, and people in some parts of the country suspicious and fearful of what takes place in other parts.

- 3 -

2.4

I can't help but think that, if some of those with the loudest voices had ever visited and had ever seen the people and places they criticize that these voices would not now be raised.

20.00

There is so much to see in this country, so much to draw from. How can you visit, with your family, the Grant Tetons, Niagara Falls, the Great Smokies, the Minnesota lakes, or Florida without feeling enriched for it and for having seen and understood a little better this country and its people.

We gather today in fellowship and brotherhood. I hope that all of us here will soon have occasion to see another part of America.

Perhaps when we have, our good will truly be crowned with brotherhood.

- 4-

Minnesota Historical Society

Copyright in this digital version belongs to the Minnesota Historical Society and its content may not be copied without the copyright holder's express written permission. Users may print, download, link to, or email content, however, for individual use.

To request permission for commercial or educational use, please contact the Minnesota Historical Society.

