

ARRIVAL STATEMENT
VICE PRESIDENT HUBERT HUMPHREY
THE NETHERLANDS
MARCH 28, 1967

Mrs. Humphrey and I are indeed happy to be in this good and brave country, with which we Americans have had such deep and lasting ties throughout our history.

We share with our Dutch friends a common heritage, including a deep concern for the principles of law and order in the world.

Our NATO alliance is just one concrete expression of our desire to work together to uphold that heritage and extend those principles.

I have come to hear the views of your leaders and to consider with them how this can best be done.

to the Netherlands
We bring with us the friendship and good wishes of President Johnson and of the American people.

ARRIVAL STATEMENT
VICE PRESIDENT HUBERT HUMPHREY
THE HAGUE
March 28, 1967

Mrs. Humphrey and I are pleased and honored to be in this good and brave country. Throughout our history, the American people have had deep and lasting ties with the Netherlands.

We share a common heritage -- including most of all a deep concern for the principle of law and order in the world. Now, both our countries are concerned with the opportunities that lie ahead in strengthening the NATO alliance and in building peaceful institutions.

Our nations and our people talk frankly and openly. While I am here, I hope to learn and listen, as well as to explain.

Mrs. Humphrey and I bring with us to the people of the Netherlands the friendship and good wishes of the people of America.
